There are things about the new comic operetta by De Keyen and Smith which was brought out at the Herald Square Thentre which invite discussion, thie nominally locating their story The authors, wrole nominally locating their story in the Middle Kingdom, have "surveyed mank nd, from China to Pru." and if a reviewer for the newsyaper press were to attempt to toliaw them eves a little way on their excursion he would be apt to find the bri f midn g it hour which the o casion allowed indusprenum and too biref. Perhaps some of the deta'ls which mer't attention may be ecounted at another time. Just now there is little opportunity to do more than to pay a deserved thate of admiration to the external dress of the new entertainment and the too artistic features of the organization that has undertaken to ex-ploit the fature works of the well-mated collabcature. Much of it must have been more than a chinese puzzle to the Consul, who sat with immebile features in one of the boxes, and it was perhaps lucky for him that he could not follow the play with full understanding, for it is doubtful g his appreciation of the incongruity of ev rything would have left him a chance to be amus d at Mr. Smith's plot. This has stuff enough in it for a cell-developed comedy. Unhappily, Mr. Smith's still seems to have been used up in writing the stery and providing the speeches and lyries. It the construction of the play he is inefficient There is no development to a climax, and since the also flows along in a regular channel without a rock or fall to change or quicken its curent, and the three pictures, with all their brillancy, are very much the same in their aesthetic feeling of monotony was developed la t light which prevented "The Mandarin" from being as pronounced a success as the opening promised.

Especially is this true of Miss Waltzinger, who sang last night to delight the heart of every judicious music lover, as she did to charm the ears of everybody. It is seldom under any circumstances that it is given to a music-lover to hear such a superb attack, such just intonation and clear tones as Miss Waltzinger placed to her credit last night. Miss Addie Ritchie, too, disclosed real talent, histrionic and musical, it seemed to us for the first time, and always she is a vision of lovelines. Praise, indeed, ought to go to all of the company and a heaped-up measure to Signor De Novellis, who gets an amazing lot of refined work out of the chorus and orchestra. whom Messrs. "LA TRAVIATA" AT THE ACADEMY.

More of Colonel Mapleson's already overdue promises were redeemed last evening at the Academy when "La Travlata" was given and several members of his company were heard for the first time. It cannot be said that the disclosure of their powers will greatly strengthen the esteem in which the company is held in the minds of the operaof last evening's cast, was the only one whose permance signified at all, and hers was one that had to be accepted with many reservations. She is an actress of energy and temperament, and pos-sessed of experience that enables her to give an personation of the hapless heroine that is no lacking in vividness and dramatic quality. Her singing however, is of a sort that will never give her standing with the musical public of New-York. Her voice, though ample in volume, did not seem last night agreeable in quality, and was, moreover, afflicted with an unceasing tremolo, so pronounce tinual uncertainty. She has fluency, but he foritura last evening was neither facile nor accurate in execution. But there were allowances to be made for Mme. Darclée on account of the de-ficiencies of the Alfredo to whom she was playing. The part was taken by Signor Betti-Signor Randaccio, previously announced, having been withdrawn from it. This was said to have been Signor Betti's first appearance on any stage, and there was not the slightest reason apparent for doubting it. His helpless inexperience was manifested at every point, and was a frequent embarrassment and delay to the progress of the performance. In his singing he was little more emclent, though he made an earnest and painstaking attempt with a singularly coloriess voice of small resonance and volume Signor Ughetto. as Germont, also made his first appearance. "JACK AND THE BEAN STALK."

The winter season of the Casino began last night an extravaganza called "The Strange Adentures of Jack and the Bean Stalk." It is the ork of R. A. Barnet and A. B. Sloane. Its comosition is based on English folklore, it draw largely from the poems ascribed to Mother Goose, and it makes frequent sallies into "The Arabian With these treasuries of material, it would be strange if something picturesque could not be adduced, and something picturesque has ndeed, that the entertainment chiefly excels. The building of the play and the invention of incidents and stage expedients were much better done than the writing of it. In the latter particular, howit is inoffensive. There is an abundance of gay music, and it was sung with much spirit. There were dash and vigor, in fact, to the whole performance, particularly the dances, and many parts of it were thus enlivened which had little to sustain them except the way in which they was done.

io sustain them except the way in which they were done.

The nursery story of "Jack and the Bean Stalk" was followed quite as faithfully as such an original is usually followed, while numerous old friends of the children strayed in from other stories, and new relations for them were discovered. Such, for instance, were the revelations that Jack was the son of Old Mother Hubbard, and that Mistress Mary Quite Contrary was the daughter of Old King Cole and the affianced bride of Jack. There are dreadful robbers in the piece—"the forte thieves"—pretty fairies, and a terrible, terrible giant. If it lasts till the holidays, now not so very far off, it will be an appropriate and attractive amusement for the time.

STAGE AFFAIRS

Several changes were effected in local theatres lest night. Mr. Herrmann appeared at Palmer's eatre, giving an entertainment in magic, and, as usual, exciting much wonder. PRISONERS PUT TO DEATH BY WHOLESALE AND BRUTALLY TORTURED TO EXTORT CONFES-SIGNS-HORRORS OF THE BLACK HOLE

London, Nov. 2 .- "The Daily News" publishes a letter from an English merchant in the Philippine Islands in which the writer alleges that horrible atrocities have been perpetrated by both the rebels and the Spaniards ,but more especially by the latter, who torture their prisoners, particularly when they are prominent men, with a view to forcing them to confess complicity in the rebellion. He declares that in some cases prisoners' hands have been nailed to walls, while in others thumbscrews have been used. A hundred prisoners were thrown in one night into a dungeon in the fortress at Manila, where there was hardly room for thirty. Th place was worse than the Black Hole of Calcutta. The poor wretches were up to their knees in filthy, putrid mud. Fifty-nine of them died during the night.

A reign of terror exists in Manila and else where in the islands. Wholesale arrests are made daily of innocent and guilty persons. The writer adds that the rebellion is solely due to the rotten and corrupt administration of the Spaniards, which the natives were unable to endure any longer. The outlook is of the blackest description, and business is at a complete to the spaniards. scription, and business is at a complete stand-still. THE AGREEMENT WITH VENEZUELA. Washington, Nov. 2-British Guiana newspapers which reached the State Department to-day dis agree with the London press over the Kaituma Railway episode and advocate compliance with the Venezueian remonstrance against the violation of the status quo. THE BALL AT OLYMPIA.

BIG AMUSEMENT HOUSE-FALL OF ONE OF THE HANLONS.

Oscar Hammerstein last night made another of is frequent altempts to astonish the New-York ublic. He opened the first winter roof garden and had what he called a "bal champetre." The vaudeville entertainment, which has hitherto been downstairs in the music hall-now become the au-ditorium-was moved up to the roof and sheltered from the icy blasts, which were not attending to their work last night, but which are expected later by glass sides, supplementing the glass roof. The variety performance all went well till its very end, and then there was almost an accident of consequence. The programme ended with the trapeze performance of the Hanlons. At the end of it they usually drop into the net, but when the first of them did so one of the props of the net gave way and he went all the way to the floor. But it was his own weight which had pulled away the prop. and so his fall was broken and he got up and went to the stage, where he bowed to the audience with the others. He really made rather a disheartening crash when he came down, "but it's nothing to the one Bryan will make to-morrow," said one of the bystanders.

It took nearly half an hour to clear and sweep the floor, and then the orchestra played an overture, which made the audience impatient. It ended, like verything else, and then two men in uniform, looking very French and uncomfortable, marched around clear space of the floor. One of them carried the American flag, and they were followed by a man made up into a good likeness of McKinley and a masked Goddess of Liberty. The likeness of McKinley was greeted by great applause, and somebody shouted "Three cheers for McKinley!" and almost everybody in the house gave them. One of the few who did not cried "Three cheers for Bryan!" but noody gave them, not even the man who had called for body gave them, not even the man who had called for them.

Next, two sets of professional dencers came and went through a quadrille, which was greeted with favor. After that came a waltz which was marked "public" on the programme. For some time a few persons in the uri orms and costumes of the huse and the flor all to thereselve, and then at last a comple presumably representing the public ventured on the floor, followed quickly by two or three more couples. They were greated with tremendous appliance by those of the public who presenting. The way in with the, bravely danced on, in softe of the appliance, led some to surpect that they were better acquainted with the manager than they pretended to be, and it was even thought that some of them were really only making believe that they did not know how to dance well. However that was, the saless went on, a few of them being for professionals only, but the nost of them of the kind marked "paid c," and people kept coming up in the elevators to look on an an uncommonly rate hour. It is only an experiment as yet, but Mr. Hammerstein has evitainly done one gode night's business with it.

As already announced in these columns, people who live as far as thirty miles from New-York wil be able to know how the battle has gone in all the States of the Union from Maine to California, and from Texas to the Canada line. This result will be accomplished by means of white and colored lights thrown hundreds of feet above The Tribune Building. These lights will be thrown in accordance with the code printed below, a little study of which will put the observer in a position to tell how the election has gone in every State of the Union.

Owing to the great interest that attaches to the way votes will be cast in this city, provision has been made in the code for emblazoning this result also against the sky. As the predictions indicate that to-night will be cloudless, The Tribune's bulletins of light will blaze the results with special distinctness to thousands of eyes.

SIGNAL CODE.

The X in the code below indicates in each case i colored light. The O indicates a white light. The colored lights will be red, to indicate McKinley; green, to indicate Bryan; and orange for Palmer.

green, to indicate Bryan; and orange for Palmer.

The lights will be displayed in a perpendicular suring. Read the code from left to right, as in ordinary print; the left-hand light will be at the top; the others will hang below, in the order stated.

GENERAL SIGNALS: In view of the fact that various States will not be heard from definitely until a late hour, provision is made in the code for a few general signals, showing the drift of the scattering returns received early in the evening. This class of signals will be easily distinguished from all others, because each one will contain a group of colored lights. It is believed that the code is entirely self-explanatory.

lights. It is believed that the code is entirely self-explanatory.

STATE SIGNALS: in each of these a string of lights will be displayed, composed mainly of white lights, but with one or more colored lights, the latter serving the double purpose of "dividers" and of indicating which way the State has gone.

The code will be made clear by taking a special case, as, for instance, illinois. That State is represented in the code by the figures 2, and these figures will be shown on the same principle as in the strokes of a fire abarm. At the top of the string there will be two white lights, indicating the figure 2; then the "divider," a colored light—which will be red if the State has gone for McKinley, green if it has gone for Bryan, and orange if it has gone for Palmer—then three white lights indicating the figure 3. The signal reads "23—Hinois has gone for McKinley." The result in every other State will be represented in a similar manner.

Take Colorado, Colorado's number is 44. "Colorado or Bryan" would be signalled by 4 white lights; next below, a green fight, representing Bryan! then 4 white lights.

It is proposed to fire The Tribune aerial signals throughout the night, or until it becomes fairly evident which political party has awept the country. GENERAL SIGNALS.
